 Gotta See Video: Will Ferrell Austin Interview

The 1970's were alive and well in Austin this month, as Will Ferrell visited the Alamo Drafthouse South in Austin to premier his new comedy Semi-Pro and to offer fans a Q and A.

Ferrell stars as the player/owner/coach of the fictitious Flint Tropics, the worst team in the now defunct American Basketball Association League.

On par with other unique Drafthouse events, the only way to even gain entrance to the free screening was to come dressed up as a Flint Tropics player.

How to pull off the perfect Flint Tropics costume? Well you'll need sneakers, white tube socks with gold rings, a gold terry cloth headband and a Flint Tropics jersey. Either homemade one could have been purchased from the Alamo Drafthouse.

While it seems complicated, hundreds of Ferrell fans were up to the task. And like something out of a time machine, last Saturday they were there in their 70's uniforms with someone even sporting the classic fro.

Watch keyetv.com's Allen Vianes interview the Semi-Pro star.

The movie opens Fri. Feb. 29.
